Open Education Course Marking Grant

COURSE MARKING RETREAT

Workbook

Course marking, or tagging courses that utilize OER, low-cost, or other no-cost course materials provide students with the power and agency to make informed decisions at the time of registration based on their own financial situations and helps to amplify redistributive justice, making sure all students have the required materials they need to succeed on the first day of class.

SPEAKER BIOS

Marcel Raisbeck is a Junior in the Social Thought and Political Economy (STPEC) program and the Developmental Disabilities and Human Services (DDHS) Letter of Specialization at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. His work at Middlesex Community College from 2015-2021 included serving as a Supplemental Instructor, a Student OER Ambassador, and doing non-paid peer support work. At his current institution, Marcel's advocacy work specializes in the intersection between ableism/disablism and other injustices. OER has been a common thread for advocacy through his entire educational career, as non-open educational materials are less accessible, less inclusive, and often incur additional costs for Disabled students to get audio, braille, or digital copies. Outside the classroom, you can find Marcel on a date with his partner, hanging out with friends at the Dining Commons, or playing Minecraft.

Kevin Corcoran is the Associate Vice President of Digital Learning for the Connecticut State Colleges & Universities System. In this role, he helps oversee the CUNY OER Program, a $4 million a year initiative that supports, promotes, and incentivizes the use of Open Educational Resources and Zero Textbook Cost materials at all the undergraduate serving institutions of the City University of New York. Andrew is also a member of the steering committee of Driving OER for Sustainable Success (DOERS3), a collaborative of higher education systems and statewide/province wide organizations that are committed to supporting student success by promoting free, customizable open educational resources (OER). As the chair of the DOERS3 Capacity Building Working Group, he has spearheaded several projects including the DOERS3 OER Contributions Matrix, a tool to help faculty talk about their open education work in their tenure and promotion dossiers, and is currently working on a book length project to collect case studies of the inclusion of open education work in the tenure, promotion, and reappointment process. Andrew holds a PhD in Sociology from the CUNY Graduate Center and has worked or studied at CUNY in some capacity for the last 17 years.

Webinar Notes: Getting Started

Webinar Notes: Lessons Learned

Workshop: Getting Started

Goal: To have each team work together to make sure they're all on the same page regarding timelines, definitions, communications, etc.

Objective: After this workshop, teams will be able to

- Articulate what qualifies (and does not) as no-cost learning materials
- Establish timelines and goals for each phase of the work (summer 2023, fall 2023, and spring 2024)
- Identify how you will document your processes, challenges, and successes and create feedback loops.

Definitions

1.) You'll want to establish a unified definition that gets used in messaging to any stakeholder group on and off campus. Take this time to work as a group and spell out exactly what no-cost includes and excludes and how it will be shared as a definition.

Workshop: Getting Started

Timelines

2.) Breaking this work into phases can be helpful. Consider what the phases of each work will look like on your individual campus. As a reminder, the major grant timeline that we're working to help you achieve is to implement no-cost course marking in your institution's Spring 2024 registration process. That being said, we recognize that some institutions will be ready to move forward sooner, and we will be here to support those efforts!

Workshop: Getting Started

Documentation

3.) How will you document your processes, challenges, and successes throughout each phase of the work? How will you create feedback loops to inform what's working and what could be improved upon?

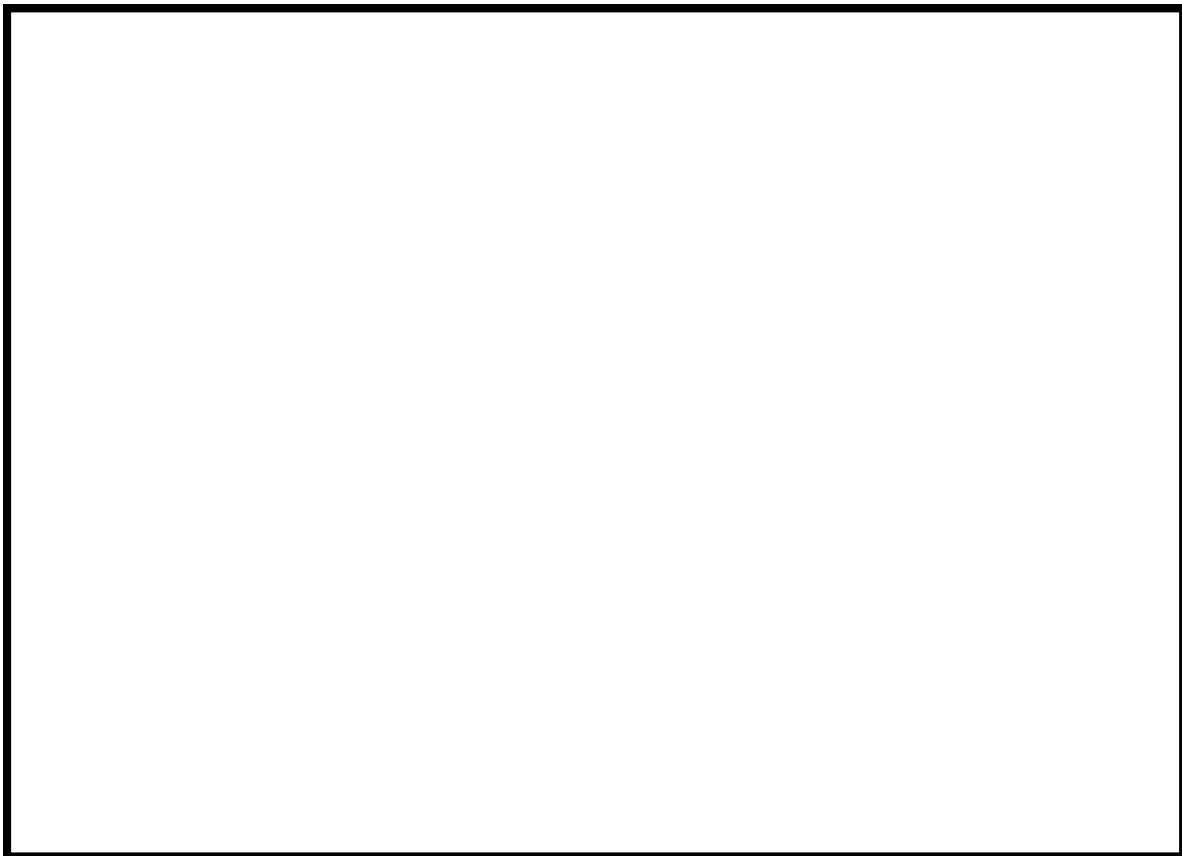

Workshop: Communication

Goal: To have each team examine the need of communicating with various stakeholder groups to ensure successful course marking processes.

Objective: After this workshop, teams will be able to

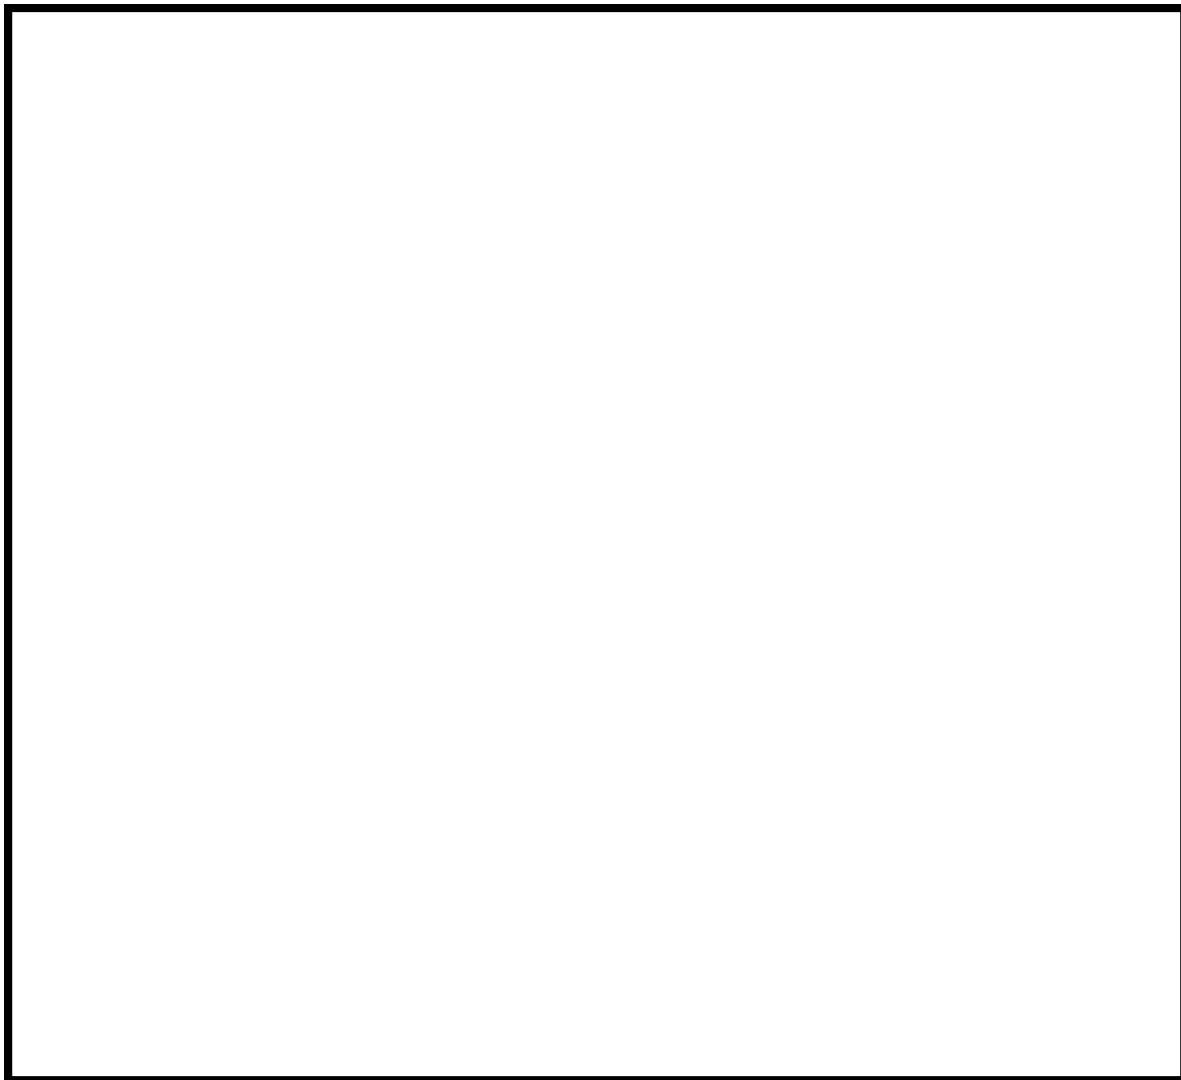

- Identify potential stakeholder groups
- Develop a clear strategy for when, how, and why to engage each group

Jot down a list of stakeholder groups

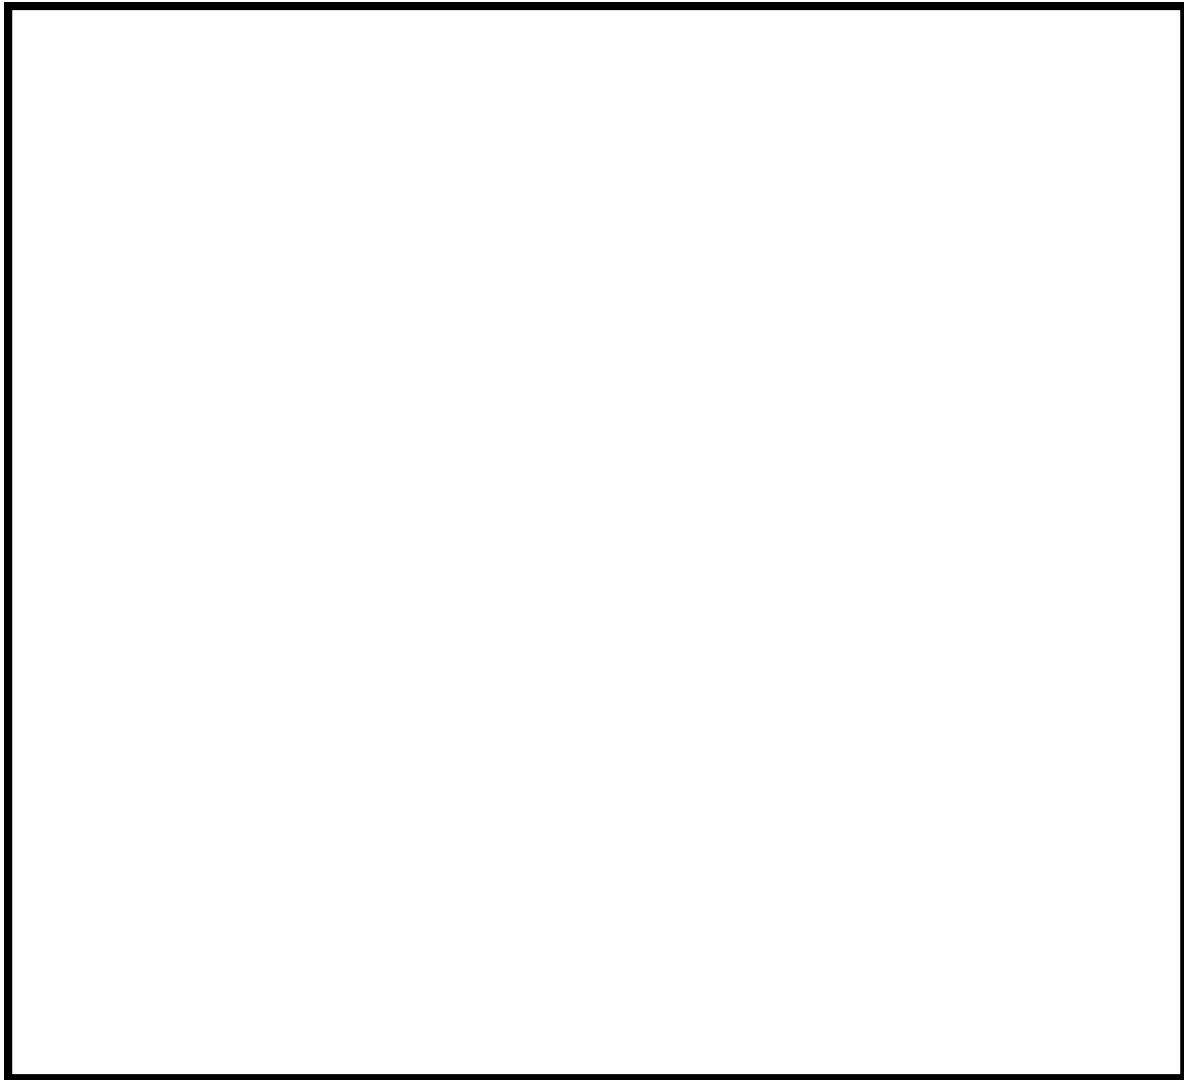

Workshop: Communication

WHO: Who on your team is responsible for communicating with each stakeholder group?

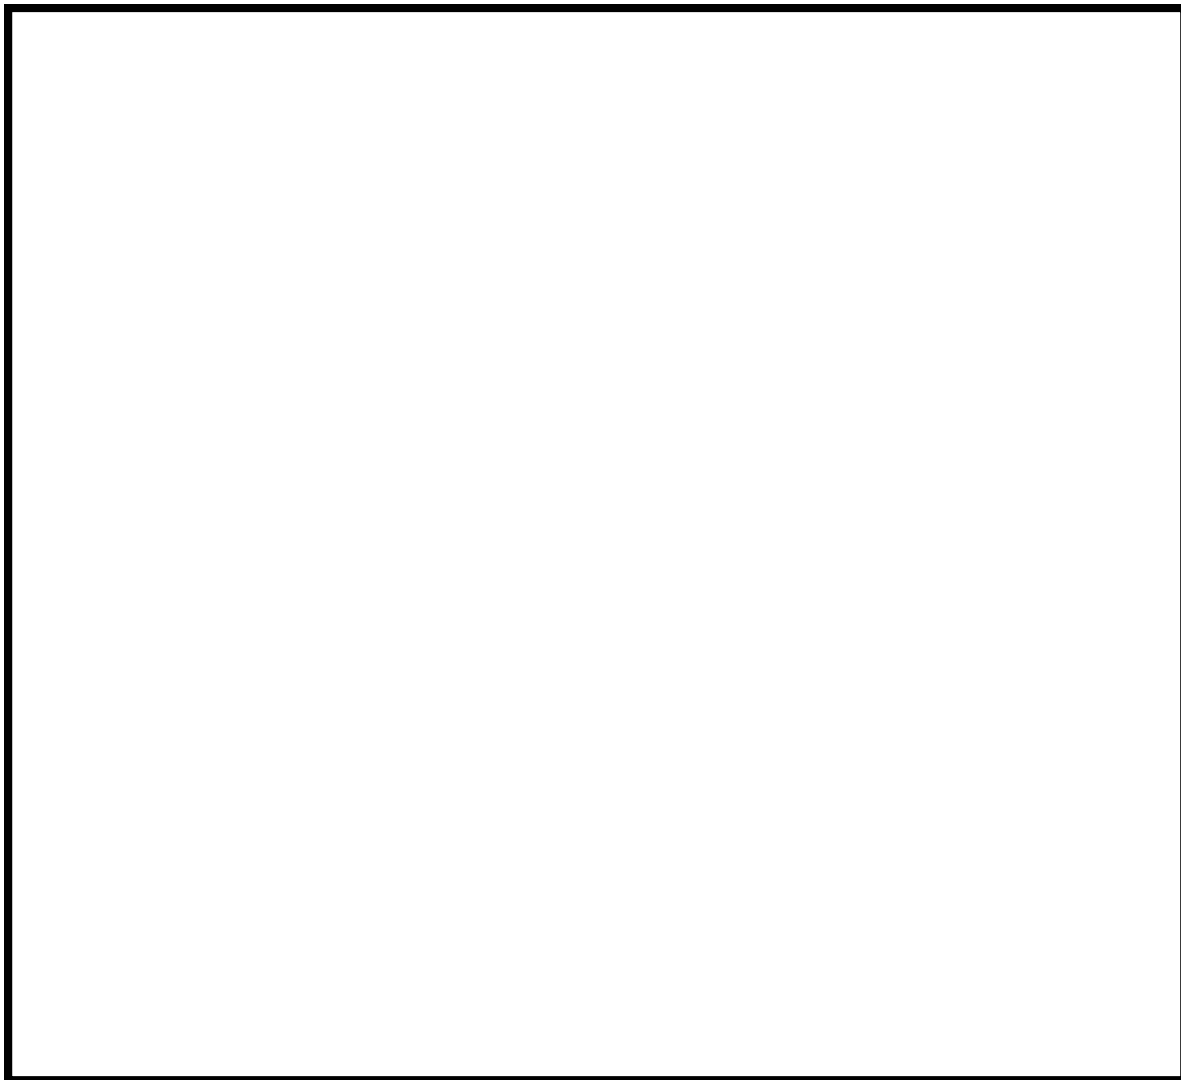

Workshop: Communication

WHAT: Focus on at least 2 stakeholder groups. What are their needs? What do they care about? What contribution can they make? What topics need to be discussed; your new idea, challenges, opportunities, furthering support)

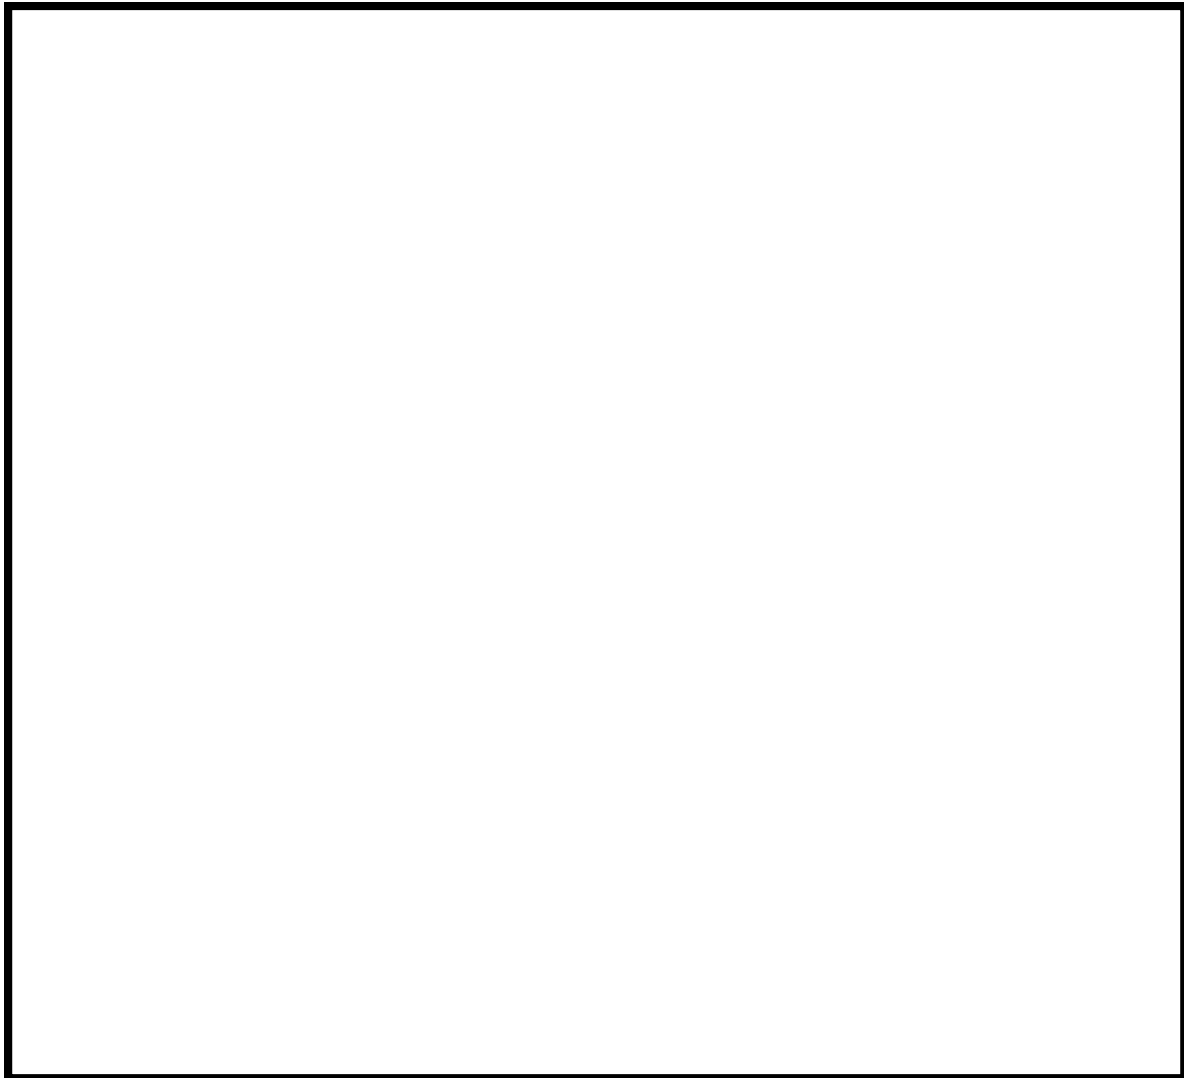

Workshop: Communication

WHY: Why are you addressing this with these stakeholders? To raise awareness for your idea & solicit support or is this an ongoing relationship that you are building? Other?

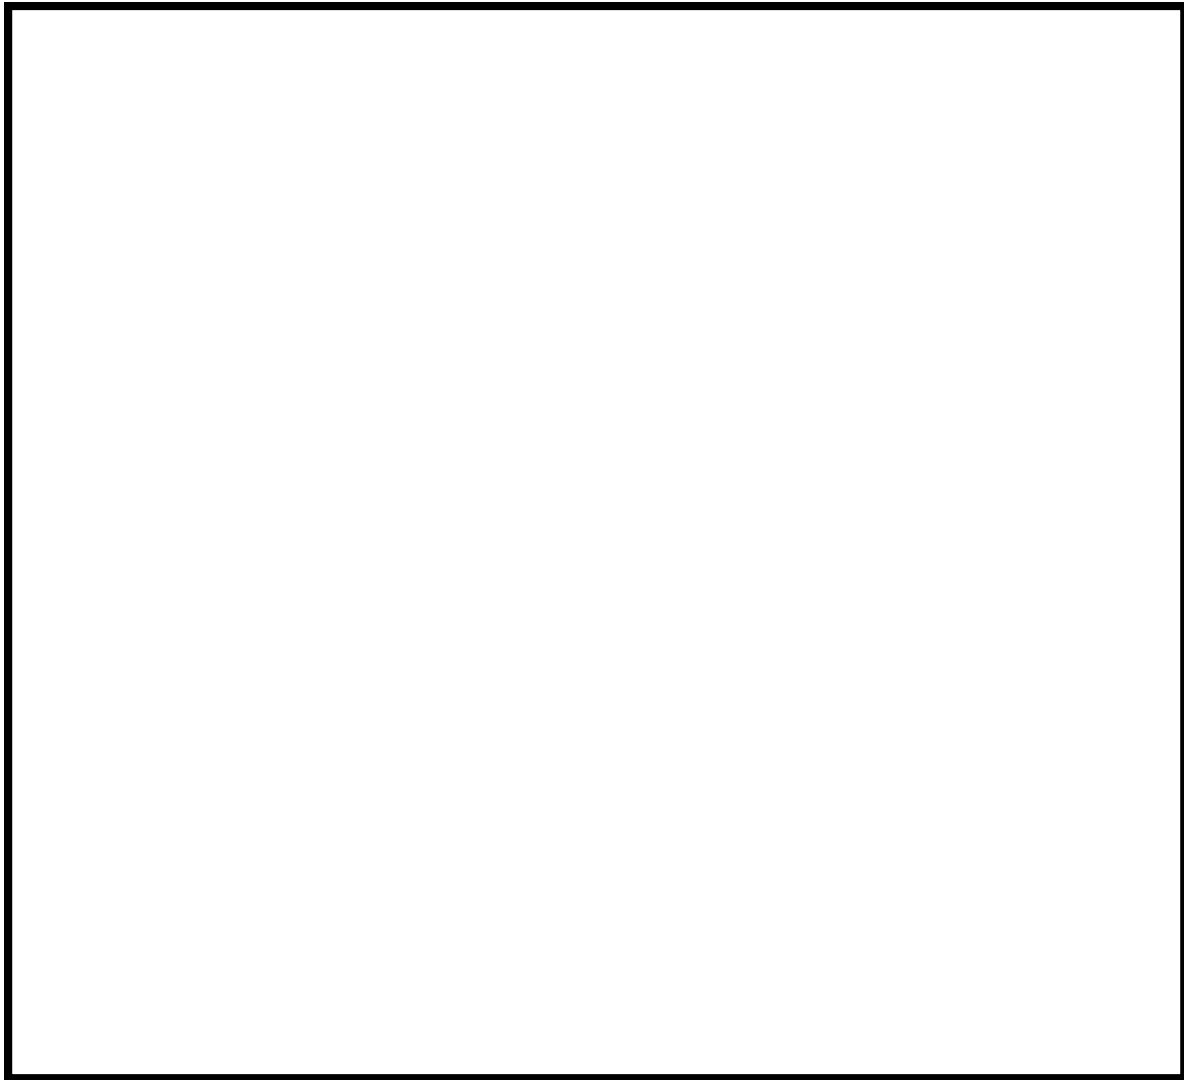

Workshop: Communication

HOW: How and when will you communicate with each stakeholder group? (in-person, phone call, letter, email campaign, etc.)

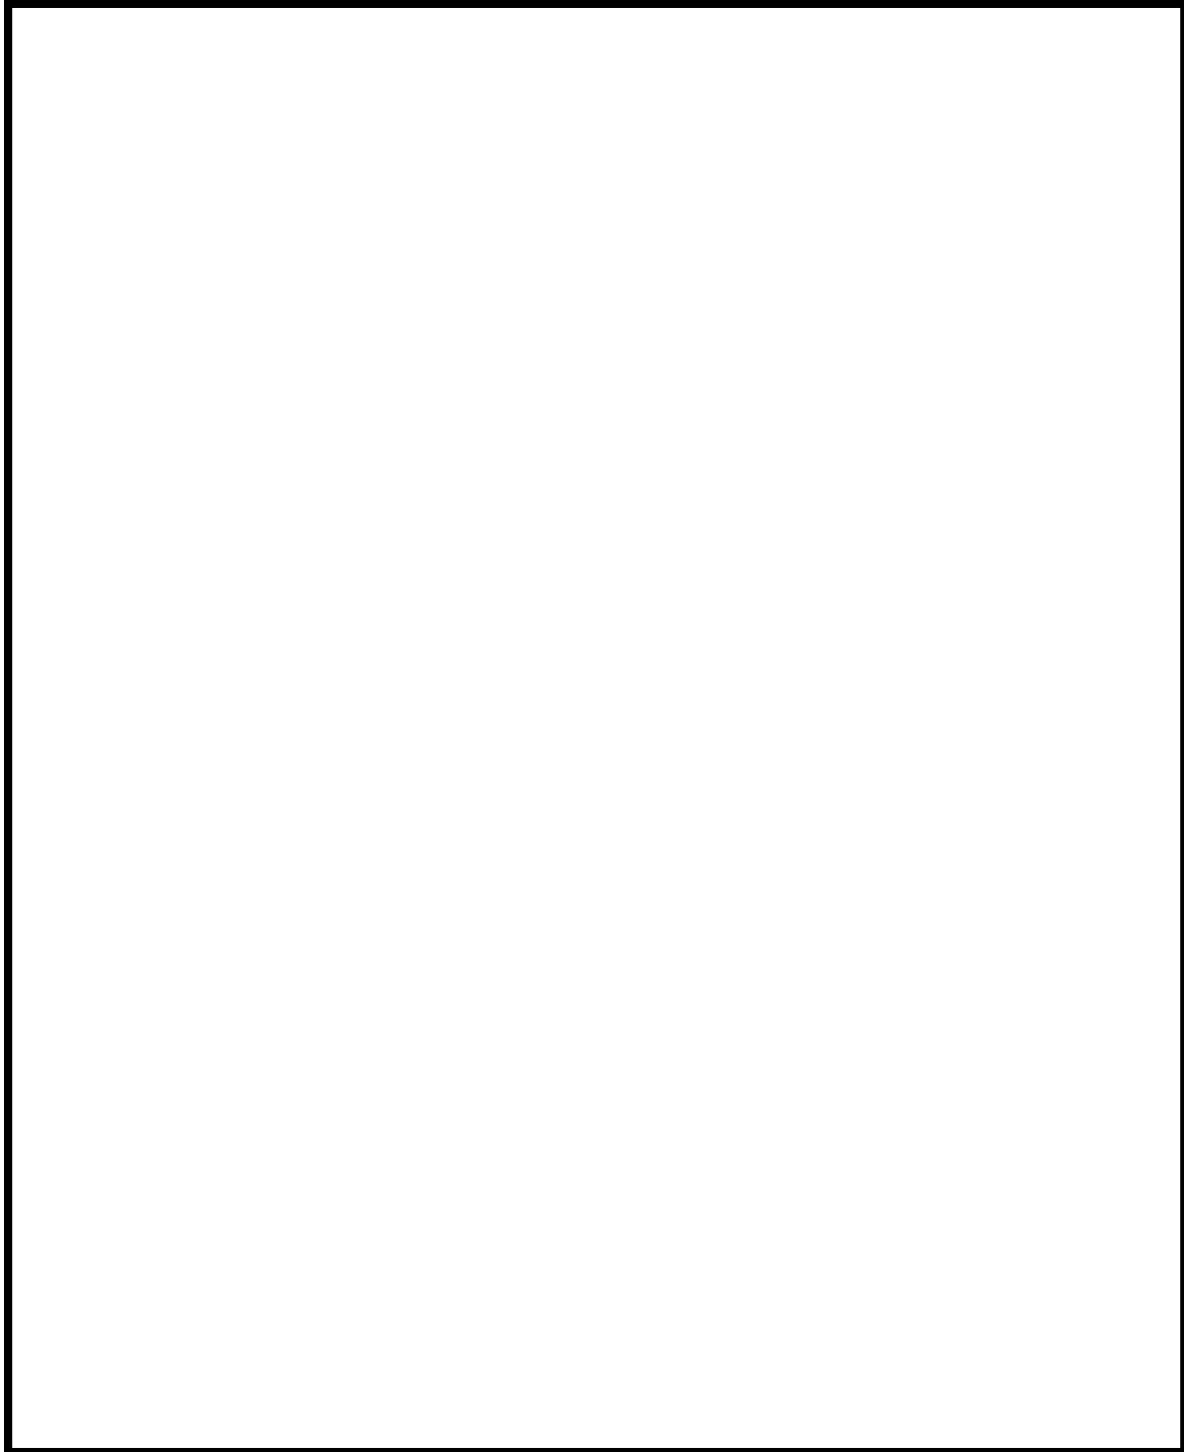

Workshop: Communication

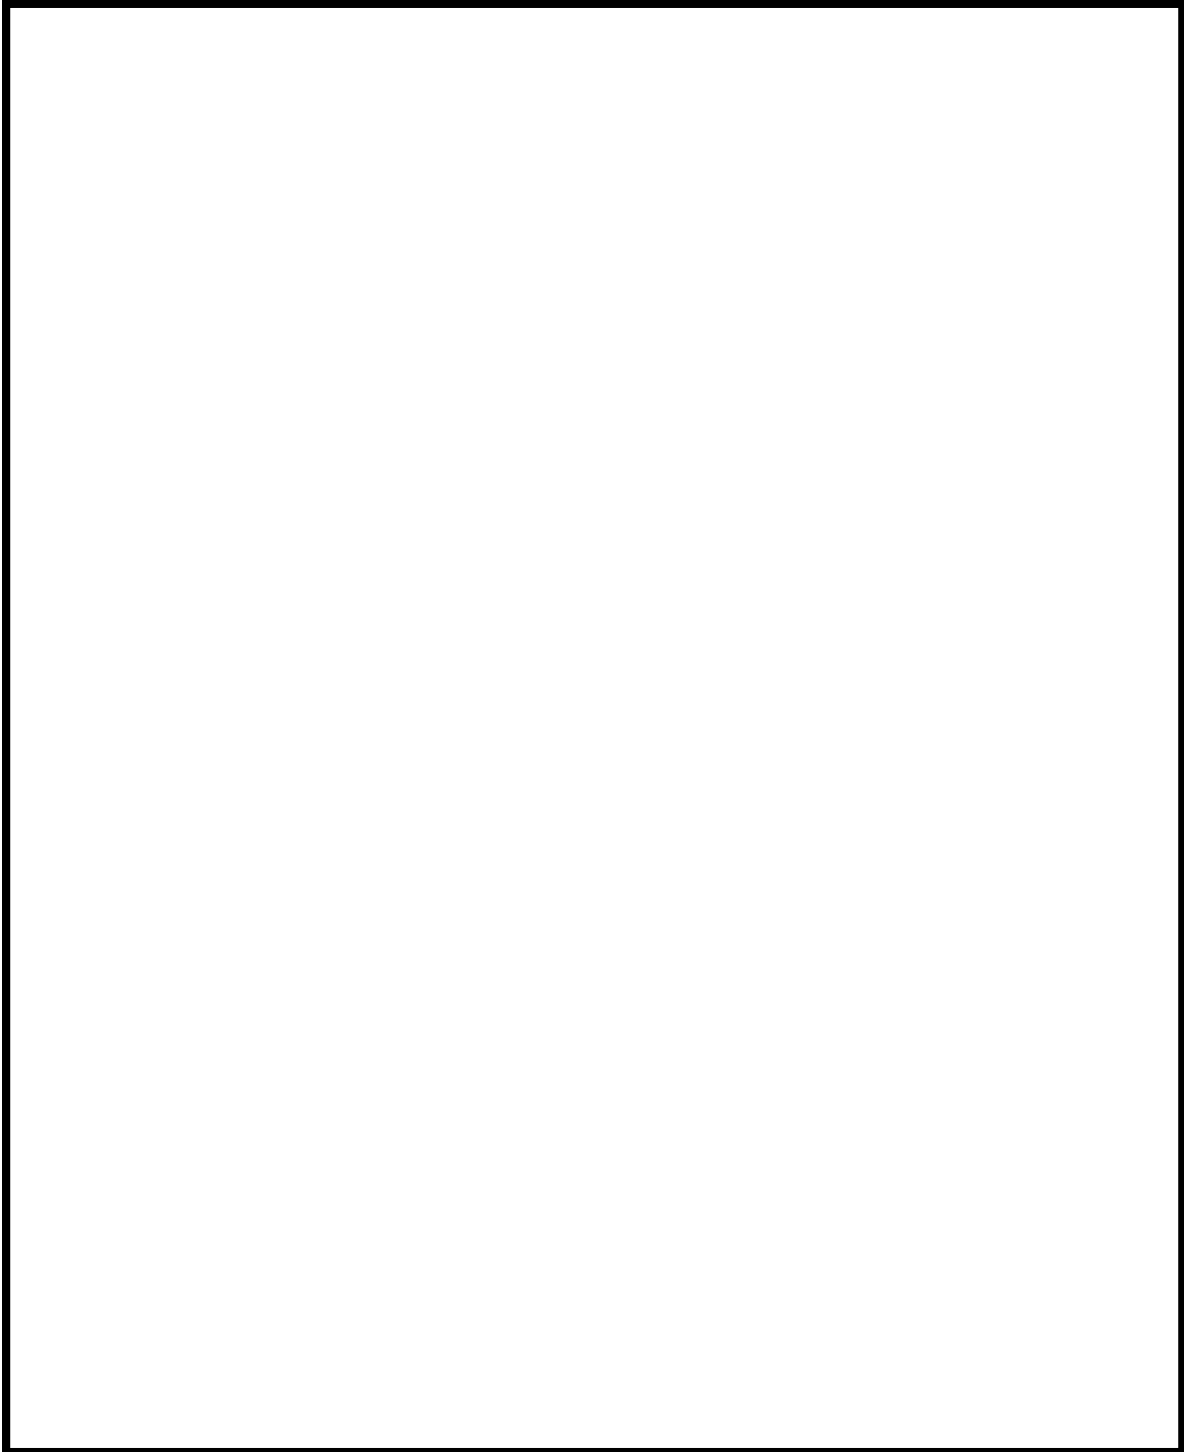

WHEN: Establish a clear time frame for your communications (daily, weekly, bi-monthly, etc.)
